

Call for nominations for the 2019 PMI Australia Awards

www.pmiaustraliaconference.org.au/awards

The Project Management Institute Australia Conference Awards provide the opportunity for practitioners to appreciate and recognise the achievements of organisations, projects and individuals in the field of project management.

For PMIAAC 2019, the array of Awards has been expanded to acknowledge the breadth of contributions to the profession, through recognising that project management enables successful stakeholder outcomes in many ways. Although built upon common principles, project management also reflects the distinct characteristics of individual contributions, the influence of industry dynamics and the role of innovation and research.

Nomination Deadline

5.30PM AEST, Friday 22 March 2019

Announcement of Winners

The winner for each category will be announced at the PMIAAC Award Ceremony and Gala Dinner on the 27 May 2018

Project Professional of the Year

Individuals who have achieved outstanding results in delivering complex project outcomes in the last 12 months.

Young Project Professional of the Year

This new award recognises that outstanding contributions to the profession can be made by younger professionals (30 years old or younger), whether as established project managers, or as aspiring project professionals, who have gained recognition for their contribution to projects in the last 12 months.

Research Achievement

Awarded to an individual or team who has demonstrably advanced the project management community's understanding of the essence of the profession and provided thought leadership, in the last 12 months. This is open to both academia and practitioners.

Distinguished Contribution to PM

This award recognises the sustained contribution over time of an individual to the project management profession.

PMO of the Year

This is awarded to a Portfolio/ Program / Project Management Office which has clearly demonstrated its value add to achievement of stakeholder outcomes in the last 12 months.

Project of the Year

This prestigious award recognises an individual project which exemplifies the application of project management to achieving business and stakeholder outcomes. For 2019, recognising the diverse contexts in which projects operate. Nominations for sub-categories for "Project of the Year" are also sought.

Innovation in Project Management

This award recognises endeavours which utilise leading-edge thought-leadership in delivering projects, regarding use of technology and/or process innovation to increase the probability of success of project outcomes.

For full details, criteria and nominations head to

www.pmiaustraliaconference.org.au/awards